This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1843 Excerpt: ...the larva becomes divested of its cocoon, which is attached so closely to the internal surface of the cell, that it appears to form part of its substance, and adds considerably to its thickness. These linings are sometimes found, to the number of seven or eight, adhering to the sides of the cell, and often have an injurious effect, diminish ing, as they do, the cell's capacity, and exciting, by their strong smell, the attacks of moths and other enemies. The number of linings found adhering to a cell, and which may be disjoined by soaking the comb in water, indicates the number of Bees to which it has been the birth-place. The Bee, thus stripped of its silken envelop, and having all its parts unfolded by degrees, and changed, through a succession of colors, from a dull white to black, arrives at the state of a perfect insect on the 20th day, counting from the time the egg is laid. She then eagerly commences the operation of cutting through, with her mandibles, the cover of her cell, and in half an hour succeeds in escaping from her prison. On quitting her cradle, she appears, for a few seconds, drowsy and listless, but soon assumes the agility natural to the race, and on the same day on which she has emerged from her prison, sets out with her seniors to engage in the labors of the field. Some of the ancient bee-masters enlarge on the attention paid by the seniors to the young worker on emerging from her prison, describing them as licking her body, supplying her with food, and seeming to instruct her in what is necessary to render her a useful member of the community. These descriptions have been repeated by succeeding writers on the subject, and the existence of these amiable traits in the kind nurses of the young is taken for granted, as an indubitable fact...
