More than any other writer, Raymond Chandler (1888-1959) is responsible for raising detective stories from the level of pulp fiction to that of literature. Philip Marlowe - his cynical, hard-boiled private eye - set the standard for rough, brooding heroes with a strong sense of honour despite living in an unfair world. Like Ian Fleming's James Bond, Marlowe has lived beyond his creator's works, appearing in radio and television shows and in numerous film adaptations. Chandler's seven novels, including "The Big Sleep" (1939) and "The Long Goodbye" (1953), with their pessimistic view of life and stark, grim realism, had a direct influence upon the emergence of film noir. In addition to the novels, Chandler wrote short stories and penned the screenplays for several films, including "Double Indemnity" (1944) and "Strangers on a Train" (1951). This is a biocritical study of the works of Raymond Chandler. It explores Chandler's unpublished script for "Lady in the Lake", examines the differences in the American and British releases of "Strangers on A Train", discusses the merits of the unproduced screenplay for "Playback" and compares Howard Hawks's directors cut of "The Big Sleep" with the version shown in cinemas. The author offers an insight into the genius of Chandler and the power of his vision to transcend the constraints of a single art form.

As a student exactly feel bored to be able to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just little students that has reading's soul or real their interest. They just do what the educator want, like asked to go to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading seriously. Any students feel that looking at is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful pics on there. Yeah, it is to be complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we want. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country.

Therefore this Creatures of Darkness: Raymond Chandler, Detective Fiction, and Film Noir can make you truly feel more interested to read.
